biz. GTA Vice City All Stars.I can't let you forget about the Samsung Galaxy S5! If you're currently reading this, then you're probably just as happy as I am that the S5 is now available for purchase. If you're a developer, you have probably gotten a couple of unit to test out and a bunch to keep for yourself. Everyone is going to receive an S5 at some point so, to make sure you're ready for the S5, I've compiled a list of what I can't live without for the S5, as well as the S6 which should be released shortly after the S5. I can't live without: S Health: I've been pretty used to not getting to use a smartwatch before now, but I can't even begin to think of a day without my watch. It basically gives you real-time stats like steps taken, calories burned, active minutes and sleep quality. It also has a feature called S Health Pro that allows you to set goals like weight loss, energy, and fitness levels that it will track for you. It also records workout history, food intake, and water intake. I found that this feature has drastically helped me with losing weight and getting fit. I actually use this feature more than any other one. I also love being able to glance down at my wrist and get a quick update on the time or how much time I've spent at a particular time of day. Samsung Pay: You may not see this as a necessity on your list. If you are a Samsung Pay user, you probably have some of your credit cards linked to the account. If you don't, you should. Samsung Pay is a mobile payment service that allows you to make a payment with the tap of a finger, just as if you were paying with a credit card. This service works with any Samsung phone and is activated with the fingerprint sensor on the rear of the S5. With a new phone, you have to sign up for Samsung Pay, but once you are signed up, you will need to link your cards to the service. It is fairly easy to do, but I can't help but feel that if they took a page from Apple's book, this wouldn't be so difficult. Knock Code: This is the one feature that I use the most 82157476af
