All creatures stunned by your dart must attempt a DC 16 Constitution saving throw. If they fail, they take 5d6 fire damage, and are staggered for 1d12 rounds (your choice) unless they succeed at a DC 14 Constitution saving throw to take just 1d6 plus their Dexterity modifier in fire damage. If a creature succeeds at the save, it takes half the damage and isn't staggered. Those staggered creatures also gain disadvantage on any further saving throws they make. They can avoid this effect by making a DC 15 Constitution saving throw at the same time as you.. The following table shows all of the characters available from different tiers of Prestige. Each character is shown with a unique stat that you can find on their page, whether it be Influence, Agility, Charisma, and so on.

Darts have a weight equal to 1d4 + your Dexterity modifier + your weapon training (dart modifier may not exceed 1). You can shoot both darts at once, but only one dart is usable at a time. You can also make darts with a weapon that has some other effect than being made of crystal.. Darts have the following features, if they are the same weapon that you are using to create them:.. Darts are weapons. These weapons are not made of crystal. You may fire two darts at once, but the ammunition must come from two feet in front of you, and three darts coming together are equivalent to 1-D6 bolts. If a creature has no weapon-trained darts, it has to make a successful attack roll against the target. If it manages to throw a dart at you instead, you must make a second strike against it with that dart before being able to damage it. There are no special rules for throwing darts..
